Forty Youngsters Guests Saturday of Country Club

CONTESTS, games, a treasure hunt and other outdoor games entertained about 40 youngsters at the annual children's party Saturday afternoon at the Marion Country club. In the evening the clubhouse was given over to the junior members of the club for dancing.

Entertainment for the children included pony rides, a peanut hunt, a driving contest on the golf course and a program of sketches by Arthur Craven and his dolls. Refreshments were served.

Plans for the party were in charge of a committee composed of Mrs. J. A. Dodd, chairman, Mrs. L. C. Stang, Mrs. C. C. Rowlands, Mrs. A. J. Berry, Mrs. Howard Mapes, Mrs. R. J. Garceau, Mrs. Bennett Bindley, Mrs. Ray R. King, Mrs. D. J. Shelton and Mrs. Frank M. Knapp.

About 35 couples danced to a program played by Bertram D. Myers' orchestra Saturday evening. The lounge was decorated with baskets of flowers and refreshments were served from a table centered with full bloom and lighted with candles.

Members of the committee which served in the afternoon also served as hostesses in the evening assisted by a number of mothers of the junior members.

Mother Singers Have Installation Tea

The East Side Mother Singers had their first summer meeting when they enjoyed an installation tea Friday afternoon at Epworth M. E. church. Mrs. Harry Smith, president, presided until the installation service, when Mrs. Arthur Deily took over the office.

Mrs. Dale Yambert presided as installing officers. The new officers, with Mrs. Deily, are Mrs. C. L. Midlam, vice president; Mrs. J. A. Lott, secretary; Mrs. C. W. Marriot, treasurer; Mrs. Frank Garfield, librarian.

A short talk was given by Mrs. Deily, expressing her appreciation of the work the club accomplished in the first year of its organization.

Mrs. Charles E. Turley, director of the Singers, presided at the table from which tea was served. The table and room were decorated with fall flowers in silver bowls. A large decorated cake was presented Mrs. Turley.

The Singers will have their first meeting of the school year on Tuesday, Sept. 13, at the Vernon Heights Junior High school.

Criterion Club Meets for Picnic

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haflick of East Center street entertained the Criterion club at an indoor picnic last evening at their home when rain prevented the members from going to Harrison-Smith park in Upper Sandusky. The evening was spent socially and with music. Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Haflick were guests. The club members will resume their meetings for the fall and winter season, some time in September. The meeting will be held with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Newby of 126 Uhler avenue.

My Beauty Hint

BY BARBARA WEEKS

THE girl who drinks plenty of water and refuses to diet will stay young and fresh-looking longer than the girl who does not follow these simple rules.

I eat every kind of food. My favorite dishes are lamb chops, Boston baked beans and banana frozen cream. Drinking plenty of water helps keep my skin clear.

Easiest and Surest Way to Put Up Pickles and Catsup

The busy housewife makes every moment count; here is something new that saves time and money. Get a 25c package of Grandma Kuhn's Pickleswect, ready for use, at your drug or grocery store. It contains just the right amount of spices and other necessary ingredients. Add ¾ to one package Grandma Kuhn's Sweetener (10c a package) to ½ gallon of good vinegar and you are ready for 50 to 150 pickles or ½ gallon catsup. Full directions for catsup, mustard and dill pickles on every package.

Makes Best Pickles You Ever Ate!

To insure your pickles keeping and being just right ask for the original and genuine Grandma Kuhn's Pickleswect. Two other satisfactory products — Grandma Kuhn's Sweetener, 10c, used wherever sweet is desired and Grandma Kuhn's Preservative, 10c, prevents fermentation in one gallon fruits, vegetables and liquids. If unobtainable, mailed direct on receipt of price.

Dinner, Reception To Mark Golden Wedding Anniversary

WEDNESDAY will mark the fiftieth milestone in the married life of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wise of 889 East Center street. In celebration of their golden wedding they will be hosts at a family dinner at noon and a reception in the afternoon and evening from 2 to 10 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Wise have centered their interests in Marion for the last 25 years of their life together, building up a wide circle of friends since they started the small grocery that has now been built up to the J. D. Wise & Son groceries at 879 East Center street and at 622 South Prospect streets.

Both are widely known in Crawford and Marion counties. Both were born in Crawford county and lived in the county until they moved to Marion.

They were married at Cardington by Rev. David Cender, United Brethren pastor. Their attendants, Rachel Wise and Douglas Plotner, died within recent years.

Five of their seven children are living. They are Warren Wise, who is the "son" in the grocery name, M. C. Wise and Harold Wise of Marion, Mrs. Grace Hoskins off Columbus and Mrs. Lois Spitler of Dayton.

Wednesday not only will mark the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wise, but also will be Mrs. Wise's seventieth birthday anniversary. She was born Aug. 31, 1862, the daughter of Hugh and Eliza Winemille Reece. Her name before her marriage was Almeda Reece. Mr. Wise, who was 71 on May 25, was born in 1861 to Henry and Sarah Hines Heinlen Wise.

Mr. and Mrs. Wise have issued a general invitation to all of their many friends to attend the reception in the afternoon and evening. Refreshments will be served.

Recipe Exchange To Feature Star's "Cook Book" Issue

PREPARATIONS are under way for the annual Marion Star Cooking school the first week in October and as in former years, a feature of the cooking school section of The Star will be the favorite recipes of housewives of Marion and vicinity.

Since the art of cooking was born, women have exchanged recipes, and in the last few years The Star sections of recipes of Marion women have been found to be a treasure chest of concoctions to tempt the palate of even the most fastidious gourmand.

Every woman of Marion and vicinity will have an opportunity to exchange her favorite recipe or recipes, in this year's cooking school section.

All that will be necessary to make this year's section an outstanding success will be for every woman or girl who has a favorite recipe, whether it be for candy or a new dish, to send it to The Star office within the next few weeks with her signature and address.

The cooking school and the cooking section of The Star belong to the women of Marion and its surrounding communities, and the exchange of recipes will be their opportunity to make the cooking section invaluable as a reference for tried-and-true recipes.

Seeing is believing on washday — by C.A. Voight

HELLO THERE, KATHERINE! YOU'RE THROUGH WITH YOUR WASH EARLY.
OH, GOOD MORNING RUTH! COME ON IN FOR A FEW MINUTES
I CAN'T STAY LONG — I JUST RAN OUT TO BUY SOME SOAP
BE SURE YOU GET RINSO. THE HARD-WATER SOAP. IT SAVES ME HOURS OF SCRUBBING EVERY WASHDAY
SO THAT'S WHY YOU'RE ALWAYS THROUGH SO MANY HOURS AHEAD OF ME! AND IS IT RINSO THAT GETS YOUR CLOTHES SO SNOWY?
YES — I DON'T EVEN BOIL MY LINENS ANYMORE, RINSO GETS THEM SO WHITE
NEXT WASHDAY
WHAT RICH LIVELY SUDS — FROM JUST A LITTLE RINSO! I MUST TRY IT FOR THE DISHES, TOO. IT'S SO EASY ON THE HANDS
THROUGH HOURS EARLIER — AND A WHITER WASH THAN EVER — I WISH I HAD CHANGED TO RINSO LONG AGO!

One box did this big wash for Mrs. Caroline Bruce of Milwaukee

"RECENTLY I took a big box of Rinso and kept a record of what I did with it. For this test I used Rinso exclusively for the first time. I'll always use it that way now! My clothes were much whiter than usual. That one big box did a lot of work. Besides doing dishes after 16 meals and the floors 3 times, I washed:

3 doilies, 1 bedspread, 2 bureau scarfs, 6 face cloths, 10 pillow cases, 4 sheets, 6 table-cloths, 37 towels, 57 handkerchiefs, 5 house-dresses, 3 nightgowns, 9 aprons, 12 pairs socks, 5 pieces underwear, 3 nightclothes, 11 shirts, 1 pair overalls (men's)

Rinso gives thick suds even in hardest water. Soaks out dirt—saves scrubbing and boiling. That saves the clothes—saves your hands. Get the BIG box.

SYNOPSIS

Just after marrying Jervis Weare and accepting $10,000 for it, Nan Forsyth sees the photograph of a man she has hated and feared for ten years in Jervis' room. She believes the man tried to murder Jervis. Nan's marriage tears her heart, for she loves Jervis dearly yet knows he considers her only as a means of saving the fortune left him by his grandfather from Rosamund Carew, his former fiancee.

CHAPTER SEVEN

A Life Endangered

CYNTHIA was married on August 20 and on the 22nd she sailed with Frank Walsh for Australia. He was to be there for six months and then return to take up the junior partnership which Cynthia's $10,000 had made possible.

Nan went to the boat to see them off. She was dutifully kissed by Frank and rather perfunctorily by Cynthia. She walked back to a room strewn with all the odds and ends which had not been worth taking to Australia, with the feeling that she had come to a dead end. She was married, and Cynthia was married. She had lost her job. Cynthia didn't want her any more. Jervis Weare certainly didn't want her.

She tidied the room, and then sat down to face the future. She had been married six days, but it was the first time she had really had time to think. To get Cynthia married, to buy Cynthia's outfit, and to get her off by the same boat as Frank, had taken every bit of her thought and time and energy. It was characteristic of Cynthia that she had not even asked what Nan was going to do. For the moment her consciousness was so saturated with Frank as to be unable to take in anything else. She had gone as completely, if not as irrevocably, into another world as if she had died.

Some day she would come back. Some day she would probably want Nan again. But Nan was not able to derive a great deal of comfort from this thought. She had mothered Cynthia ever since Cynthia was born and she, a baby of three, had cuddled the new baby in her small strong arms.

When she had sat on the edge of the bed for about half an hour she got up, put on her hat, and went out. It had become clear to her that she must have a job—and jobs do not just drop into your lap; you have to go out and wrestle for them.

When she had been to three agencies, she felt better. None of the agencies had anything to offer her, but one of them had asked whether she would care to make a voyage to South America in charge of children. She toyed with the idea over a cup of tea. It was not without its charm. Very, very badly she felt the need of some one to look after.

What she really wanted to do was to look after Jervis Weare. She wondered if he was sleeping better. She wondered if he had left town. She wondered who darned his socks. She wondered if he was very much in love with Rosamund Carew. She wondered where the tall, fair Rosamund was now, in town, or in the country? It would be quite easy to find out. She knew Rosamund's address well enough, since she had often taken letters to her for Mr. Page.

She paid her bill at the tea-room and walked slowly along. It would be quite easy for her to walk down East Sixty-Fifth street. It was, of course, very improbable that she would learn anything by doing so. It was irrational to expect to learn anything. It was irrational to want to see Rosamund.

She walked through Sixty-Fifth street. The door of No. 29 was shut, and the blinds were down. When Nan had walked to the end of the block, she turned back. This made it necessary for her to pass No. 29 again. She stood still and looked at the house. Something came to her from it—she didn't know quite what it was, but she didn't like it.

As this thought went through her mind, she saw a taxi coming up the street toward her. The taxi stopped in front of No. 29. Without conscious plan, she whisked round behind the taxi and was in time to see Rosamund Carew emerge and mount the tops which led to No. 29. Nan received an impression of height, grace, and brilliance. Rosamund went up the steps, and a man got out of the car and followed her.

Nan leaned sideways against the taxi. She tried to step back, and the pavement lifted under her foot. The man was Robert Leonard. After 10 years, she was just as sure of that as she was that when she had seen him last he had just struck down Jervis Weare and left him to drown.

Nan stood behind the car, waiting for her strength to return. In an instant, Robert Leonard ran down the steps. Nan saw him for a moment in profile, and then the car was between them. He wore a light felt hat and a grey suit. His face was florid and tanned. He had a small fair clipped moustache and a straight line of light eyebrow. The eyelids beneath it had a crumpled look.

Nan pressed close up against the car. She did not want Robert Leonard to see her. He must be a cousin of Miss Carew's—she remembered that Rosamund was Rosamund Veronica Leonard—there was nothing odd that he should be with her. And then Robert Leonard's voice:

"It's the four-fifteen all right. You'll have to hurry. Let him come out of the ferry house and get well away. He's sure to walk—he has a craze for exercise."

"And supposin' he takes a taxi—what then?" This was the driver, in a hoarse, throaty voice.

"You must do the best you can," said Leonard impatiently.

He turned away. The driver's voice followed him.

"Look here, cap'n, I'm not so keen on this job as I was."

Leonard turned round again.

"Take it or leave it!" he said.

"Twenty-five hundred dollars's twenty-five hundred dollars," said the hoarse, complaining voice.

"Exactly."

"And jail's jail."

"Well," said Leonard carelessly, "you needn't touch it if you don't want to."

"Oh, I'll do it," said the driver "I'm a man of my word, I am."

Nan heard the whir of the starter. Her knees were shaking. The taxi began to move. It slipped away, leaving her shelterless.

Robert Leonard, with his back to her, was mounting the steps of No. 29.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, August 30

THE lunar transits of this day are extremely interesting, and promise a very lively, progressive and adventurous state of affairs. It is probable that a suddenly presented opportunity may instigate a radical change in the affairs, with new environment, friends and contacts generally. This having a far-reaching effect on the future destinies. Both private and business interests are concerned, and the disposition to brave adventure, bold initiative an aggressive action may be safely indulged, as matters of lifelong importance may come up for decision.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a record year, with events of far-reaching importance on the future life abruptly presented for decision. Unforeseen developments and sudden opportunities may have a radical influence on both business and private associations, environment and interests. A child born on this day may be bold, adventurous, energetic and skilful, and should reach an important place in life through its ingenuity and independence.

FAMILY GATHERING

GALION, Aug. 29—A family gathering was held Sunday at the home of Philip Gottfredt east of the city. About 40 relatives were present for a dinner and program of music and readings.

MOUSER TO SPEAK AT GALION MEETING

GALION, Aug. 29—The local Kiwanis club is planning an open meeting for Sept. 6. Congressman Grant Mouser Jr. of Marion is to be the speaker.

On Sept. 20 Kiwanians will entertain their wives at First Presbyterian church at which time motion pictures of scenic places in Ohio will be shown.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Despite the Hideous Warning from an Unknown Chinese It Is Decided To Attempt the Rescue of the Girls without Further Delay.

LONG experience with my Peter Pan has enabled me to predict his reactions to almost any set of circumstances, and I had a prompt answer to my fear that he might take Hugh's emphasis upon the necessity of co-ordination between the plane and the attacking party as a challenge. His whole body stiffened, and his voice was distinctly hostile as he answered.

"If you'll have your men ready to attack at any moment you wish to select," he said, "I'll fly low over that house just ten minutes before that time to the second. But you must give me the time before I leave, and let nothing interfere to change it."

He Must Decide

"That, of course," my father said quickly, averting any possibility of a resentful reply from Hugh. "And now, is there anything else to discuss? It is getting late."

He did not make a direct appeal to Harry Underwood, but Marion's stepfather knew that it was there. I saw his big body stiffen, and his head go back as if he had been struck a sudden blow. Then through stiffened lips he said slowly:

"I know I can't put this off any longer. I've got to take the whole brunt of this thing. Samuel Brixton is missing, his wife is ill, and Ronald is, as he himself admits, too young and inexperienced to be compelled to make such a decision. I dare not tell Lillian of this last hideous Chinese complication which has made us all hesitate about this attack to which Lillian already has consented. Yet if this should fail —if, because we attack, the girls are sacrificed—how am I ever to face Lillian?"

What Will He Say?

His voice was so agonized, his eyes so tortured, that I sprang up and, crossing to him, caught his hands as he instinctively rose with the rest of the men.

"As you have faced her for all the years since your return," my voice rang out, "in the full consciousness that whatever you do will be fully approved by her. Do you think she will not know how this decision is torturing you? But for her sake and Marion's, you must not delay any longer."

He looked down at me for a second, then stooped and kissed me, a tender, reverent caress.

"You blessed heartsearch!" he said.

I heard the quick intake of a breath behind me, Hugh's, and was suddenly in terror for fear Dicky also had heard that betrayal of the army officer's ridiculous jealousy of so brotherly and innocuous a kiss as Harry had given me. But a quick, furtive glance at my husband showed him looking at Harry with all his sympathetic heart, and I was thankful indeed that his feeling for his friend, "passing the love of a brother," was so strong that he had eyes for nothing but him.

"I am sure Madge didn't mean this minute, Harry," he said. "We all know what this means to you. Take a little longer, if you wish."

"Of course," my father and Hugh Grantland echoed. Only Ronald said nothing. He again had buried his face in his hands and sat motionless, save for an occasional long shudder running over his entire body.

Harry Decides to Attack

"No!" Harry's exclamation was so strong that it was almost a shout. "I must not, cannot, wait another second. I say we make the attack tonight, as soon after dark as Hugh and Dicky think practicable."

Hugh sprang to his feet as if he had been waiting only for that word.

"Then," he said quickly, "we must go at once to that headquarters Dr. Barnes found for us, from which we're starting out. We can arrange the final details there. There will be very few to arrange. The ground force is in readiness."

"Also the air," Dicky said shortly, almost crumpily. Then, as if in swift recollection of his determination to rule his choler, he pointed to himself with a whimsical gesture.

The men were at the door when Ronald, who had risen with them, spoke pleadingly.

"May I go with you?" he asked.

Hugh, Harry and Dicky looked at each other, and then, with tacit consent, at my father, who gave the boy a long, steady look.

"It is your right to go, my boy—if you think you ought," he said.
